

31 March 2011

Dear Salil Shetty, dear Kate Allen,

We are writing to you as members of the Independent Review Panel of the INGO Accountability Charter, in order to give you feedback on the Report which you have submitted.

We should like first of all to thank you for your participation in this exercise and to recognise the commitment to accountability that this demonstrates.

Our approach to assessing the reports which we have received has been to focus on three dimensions in particular:

- How complete is the report in relation to the guidelines used?
- How strong is the evidence given for the self-assessment that each organisation has conducted?
- What evidence is there of institutional commitment to greater accountability and to using the reporting process to advance it?

On completeness, we want at the outset to recognise the demanding nature of many of the GRI requirements. Many organisations found it difficult to respond to some of the more detailed requests for information. We attach a note by the Secretariat that goes through the shortfalls against the reporting template in detail. While you may find this of value, we should like to emphasise that we do not consider that, at least at this stage of the exercise, it is essential to meet every element of the template – which we recognise may in some cases be overly demanding, particularly for smaller institutions. We have however noted below areas where we felt that your organisation might wish to invest more attention in your next report.

On evidence, we looked in particular for references not only to relevant policy documents, but also to examples where the self-assessment was supported by specific action (for example, drawn from operational activities, whether successful or unsuccessful).

On institutional commitment, we looked for evidence of top-level ownership of the report (for example an opening statement signed by the Chief Executive); of using the report as a means of identifying areas of relative strengths and weaknesses in the organisation (as opposed to a box-ticking exercise); and of a systematic concern with accountability, including recognition of areas for further work. We would hope that progress in such areas would be high-lighted in future reports.

We are enclosing for your information some examples of what seemed to us good practice in responding to some individual indicators, based on the GRI framework.

Of the 17 reports made available to us, 10 were from organisations which offered responses both from international and national bodies within the same overall organisation. In such cases, we are writing to both levels in a single letter.

Reflecting on these cases, we felt that for such organisations there were three ways in which such reporting could most easily be rationalised both to permit a good understanding of the overall organisation's approach to accountability and to limit duplication:

1. There could be one global report from the international arm of the organisation, drawing on, as appropriate, evidence of action by national chapters/affiliated organisations. Should such a global organisation already produce an 'Accountability Report' or similar, this should so far as possible either follow the broad structure of the GRI template or at least permit ready cross-reference to it¹.
2. There could be a GRI-standard report at global level (as under 1), but national chapters/affiliates could also incorporate a GRI-standard report into other documents that they are already producing. Such reports should again either follow the broad structure of the GRI template or at least permit ready cross-reference to it.
3. There could be GRI-standard reports at both global and national levels, where this was seen to add value.

Organisation-specific feedback to Amnesty International

To Amnesty International:

The report gives a good sense of your organisation and scores well on completeness. Parts 2, 3 and 4 of the Profile Section are very informative. We especially appreciate your responses on part 2 of the Profile Section and indicator NGO1 and see these as good practice from which other organisations can learn (see "Good practice on GRI Reporting" attached to this letter). The report could however be improved in the future by providing more evidence. The institutional commitment to accountability comes across strongly in the report, for example in the statement (1.1).

To Amnesty International UK:

The report does well on completeness. It is particularly strong on governance and finance issues. There are also very clear signs of institutional commitment. We feel that compliance with the GRI requirements is best done at the global level. However, if you wanted to do it nationally as well it would be helpful to specify the exact page references in the compliance table. You might want to consider how to best align your national and global accountability aims in future reports.

¹ Such references should be to particular paragraphs or pages of a report – so that they do not need to be deduced from lengthy sections of the report.

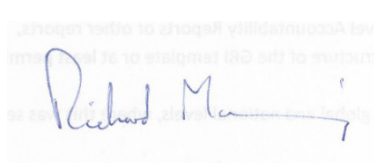

Our intention is that this letter, and any response that you may wish to provide, should be made publicly available on the Charter website, along with your organisation's report. However, should there be errors of fact in the feedback above or in the more detailed Secretariat note on conformity with the reporting framework, we would of course wish to correct these before publication.

Should you have any comments we would appreciate a response by 28 April 2011.

Yours sincerely,

Wambui Kimathi
